

February 26th 2006

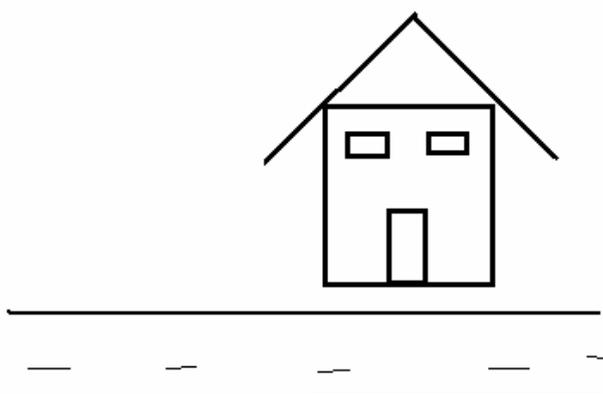

Original Text

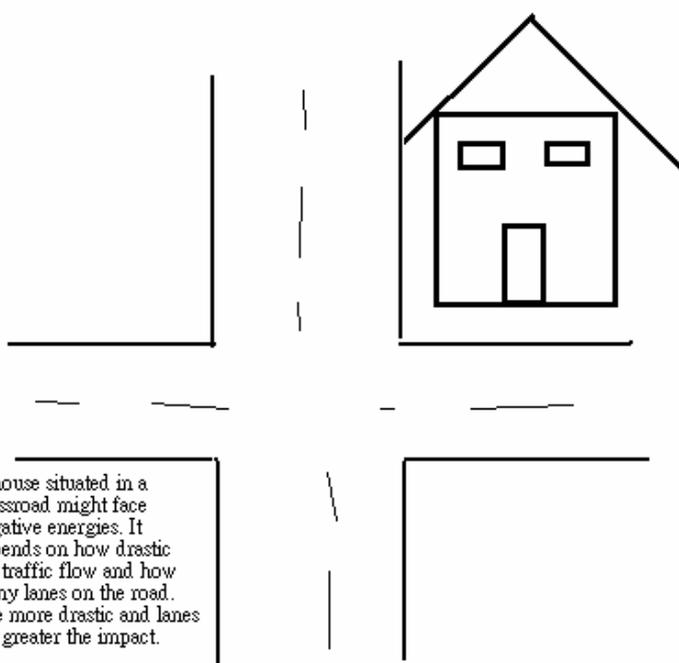

Feng Shui-Topography

Feng Shui is concerned about the internal and external environment in which we work and live in. This week we will explore the external environments that are not conducive to harness the best possible energies. Most of such bad effect will affect the health of the family members, thus the ability to generate income.

A straight road or river in front or near the house is said to be 'insentive' or 'inauspicious' that bring unwarranted energies to the house.

A house situated in a crossroad might face negative energies. It depends on how drastic the traffic flow and how many lanes on the road. The more drastic and lanes the greater the impact.

Kerby Kuek

info@misterfengshui.com

Fax: 852-2873-6859

info@misterfengshui.com