Feng Shui (Wind 風 and Water 水)

「氣乘風則散，界水則止」。In English, this sentence literally means, “Energy is dispersed by wind while stagnated by water,” which implies the relationship of energy, air, and water. From this relationship is derived the study of Ham Yu, or today’s popular term, Feng Shui. This study can be divided into two parts: landforms and energy. Feng Shui is based on the physical environment to bring balance and harmony to your life and family. We often use many Feng Shui principles subconsciously, or without being aware of it.

Take a minute to ponder these topics to ensure you understand the powerful meaning behind them. In the process, you will probably recognize that these ancient wisdoms are more common sense than superstition.

Change

Chinese believed that earth’s magnetic field forces are in constant movement in accordance with planetary bodies’ movement, and the energies related to the time dimension do not stay the same. For instance, Saturn and Jupiter come into a new alignment every 20 years and such an occurrence will result in changes of magnetic field forces. These changes thus filter down to earth and human beings. In Feng Shui, the time element is crucial. No person, home or office enjoys good cycles or bad cycles forever. Different cyclical patterns of energies have different weaknesses and strengths depending on the Period at hand.-we do not believe in lucks but opportunities.

I have received lots of request from subscribers, especially from South East Asians, requesting that I write more on Chinese Names, this issue, I will be focusing more on Chinese names and for the Westerners please comprehend as much as you can.

Face Reading

WHAT IS FACE READING?

“To examine a person, we must first examine his heart, to examine his heart, we must first examine his face” by Song dynasty’s Chan Pur, a famous Face-Reader.

Face and palm readings, as well as aura and vocal energies, are used to analyze and predict a person life’s destiny. Often requiring the rare ability to read subtle energy, these unique observational techniques are still practiced today. The ancient Chinese believed that a person’s face is inborn and will reflect his or her heart and thoughts. Much of the communication within our peers is nonverbal. Members understand the shared common body language but do not need language to communicate.

The generic approach tells us that human will inherit certain traits and attributes from parents or ancestors. Our height, weight, color of skin, eyes, and vocal to name a few are affected by genes and as a result certain patterns will emerge and the cycles of universe will repeat itself. Face reading tries to capture such patterns and predict the futures events that might occur in a person’s journey of life. For instance, when a person is born with thick eyebrow, more often than not such person’s parent also with thick eyebrow and the reverse is also true. Eyebrow like any other area of our face is closely related and affected by the functionality of our body parts and organs especially kidney. Person born with thick eyebrow is said to have strong kidney or in western words healthy and functional kidney. Person with thick eyebrow (will explain in details later) is rather active and aggressive and such person has higher sex drive than normal fine eyebrow person. Due to his adrenaline rush, such person is eager to satisfy his gratification with many partners other than his wife. As for female, due to the same reason, she might not have the patient for details and as such, she is rather weak in fine and details works.

A person who is constancy working outdoor with sunshine or cold weather will logically have rough skin as opposed to an office person that has higher chance of a smooth skin.

Western psychology has determined that our thought electrical wave is radiated through the upper skin of our body and reflected to our whole body parts and organs. Over time, such conditions will filter through and certain structures and patterns will emerge, as our cell memory is formed. Such structure will then be reflected by our face textures. With few thousand years of Chinese Statistically approaches of face reading, I am sure your will find such techniques amaze you.
